SENATORS WERE OUTPLAYED.

Weak Fielding and Failure to Bunch Hits Lost the Game.

BALTIMORE, May 5.-At no stage of the game here to-day was Washington in it, as the Orioles played all around the visitors and won hands down. Bad errors by Joyce in the first two innings gave the visitors three runs. and after that the result was never in doubt. The Senators had not much difficulty in finding Brown's curves, but they nearly always hit the ball straight at a fielder. Joyce, Cartwright and Hassamaer were the only ones who sent the ball safe. The Washingtons played with little or no life, in strong contras with the fast work of their opponents.

The home team set the crowd wild with de light in the eighth inning when they retired the Senators on a triple play. Joyce had led the Senators on a trippe play. Joyce had led off with a single and Abbey was given first on balls. Medimire sent a grounder to third, which Medimire sent a grounder to third, which Medimire sent and Bonner threw Medimire out at first. Brouthers propelled the ball over to Medimire and Joyce was caught off third. The play was effected so cleanly and quickly that for a moment the full extent was not realized.

ged. oung Mercer pitched a fairly good game Young Mercer pitched a fairly good game, but his support was not at all up to the standard, Tebeau, Maguire, and Selbach being offenders, as well as Joyce. The captain had three unnecepted chances in the first two innings, which were most damaging, two being wild throws and the other a miss of Radford's throw to third. Tebeau was slow in handling ground hits, while Selbach made a wild throw to first, which cost a run. McGuire's error was a miss of a thrown ball, allowing error was a miss of a thrown ball, allowing Keeler to score in the sixth inning. Maci was spiked by the runner and the error was partly excusable,
The great trouble with the Senators was their failure to keep up with the procession. They were outplayed, and the Baitimores won the game on its merits. Jim O'llourke was the umpire, and he favored the Orioles in the few close decisions he was called on to make, but the home team did not need the umpire's help to win. If the Orioles keep up their good work they will be very much in the rare for the reasonal.

Metiraw was the first batsman to face Metiraw was the first batsman to face Mercer, and was promptly given four bad bails. Keeler drove a safe one to center, Tebeau being slow in fielding the bail. Brodie was thrown out at first, but Mercer filled the bases by purposely giving Brouthers his base on balls. Kelley sent an easy grounder to Joyce, and he had plenty of time to retire Medicaw at the plate, but threw badly, Bonner forced Kelley at second, Keeler scoring on the play, and Jennings was retired at first on Selbach's assist.

elbach's assist. For Washington Abbey reached first on balls after two out, but was left, as McGuire went out at first. After Robinson had struck out in the second Brown got to second on Joyce's wild throw and reached third on the latter's muff of Radford's throw after Paul had caught McGraw's fly. Brown tailied on Keeier's triple. Hassamaer started off for the Senators with a hit, but was doubled up on Selbach's fly to Jennings, "Roaring B'll" being caught off the base balls after two out, but was left, as McGuire

Brouthers began the third inning with a walk to first base on balls and stole second. Kelley and Beitz were easily retired, but Selbach threw wild to first in fielding Jennings' grounder, and Robinson hit safely, Brouther sooring. Brown retired the side by striking out. Ba iford and Joyce reached their bases after two out on a base on balls and a single, but Abbey left them on his grounder to Bon-

Neither side scored in the fourth, but Balti-mere added another in the fifth on a single by Brouthers' and Kelley's triple. In this in-ning Bobinson was called out for a foul strike, while Clarke was ordered off the couching line by the umpire. The Orioles pilled up three more in the sixth on hits by MeGraw and Keeler and Kelley's home run to deep center. In the seventh Jennings tallied on being hit, Robinson's single and the lat-ter's force by Brown. ter's force by Brown. Senators finally broke the ice in their

The Senators finally broke the ice in their half of the sevent, when Selbach was given a base on bulls and reached the plate on Cartwright's double. Giants in Pennant Winning Form. wild over baseball was again demonstrated to day, when, notwithstanding the poor showing of the Giants so far, 18,000 people saw them meet the diants so far, 15,000 people saw them meet and vanquish the champion Bostons. The struggle for supremacy was the hottest seen here this season. Westerrelt pitched his third professional game, and his work was simply marvelous. But three safe hits were made off him, two of which were scratches to the infield. Nash was the only one to make a clean drive, but it was not until the last inning that he made it. Phillies Met with Defent.

PHILADELI'RIA, May 5,-The Brooklyn team downed the Phillies to-day in an exciting game, the features of which were fine fing game, the features of which were line fielding and clever plays on the part of Cross. Glements, Allen, and Foutz. The game opened poorly for the home team, the men being quickly put out in one-two-three order. In the third inning their three runs raised the hopes of the spectators, but they were soon dashed by the visitors going one better in the fifth inning. Then the tally stuck there, and for the rest of the game the excitement ran high, and several times it seemed as if first one and then the other would score, but the men in whom their hopes rested had a knack of knocking files into the hands of the fielders or else being left on bases. In the minth inning the home team put Turner to the but in Carsey's place, but he did not make much headway. Attendance 11,300. Score: much headway. One night at supper with a party of his friends in his own hotel after the performance a discussion arose as to whether the time allowed for this action in the performance was sufficient for it really to be done. It was strongly argued pro and con, Mr. Sothern being in the affirmative, At last a small wager was laid about the matter, and Mr. Sothern agreed to enter his bath room, clothed only in a bath robe, his proper habiliments being placed upon a chair in the room. He was to speak the lines of the part, plunge into the tub, dry himself, put on all his clothes and come out fully dressed in the time and manner he did upon the stage. One of his friends volunteered to fill the tub with water while Mr. Sothern disrobed in his bedroom. When all was ready Mr. Sothern entered the bath room, the ciothes he had just doffed were placed near him, and the signal was given to begin. All went smoothly until the lines referring to breaking the lee in his tub with a hammer. Then came the speech, "Never mind, one brave plunge and all is over." Then the sound of the plunge was heard, but it was followed by a yell not in the part and Mr. Sothern's voice saying, "You've filled the tub with hot water." However, on he went bravely, and in just seven minutes and a half he came out of the bath room with he went bravely, and in just seven minutes and a half he came out of the bath room with the regular speech: "Where's my other slip-per?" There is always something more fascinating about a juvenile opera than one sung by grown-up folks. At least it appeared so last night at the Academy of Music, where the fifty-seven charming little tots who recently played "Pinafore" repeated the performance in a most graceful manner.
